

Statistical System decisively depend on the available human, material and financial resources. Ensuring skilled human resources, upgrading technical endowment and other components of the statistical infrastructure represent not only an absolute necessity, but the unique alternative that could be adopted under the technological progress circumstances, in view to ensure the optimal framework for promoting the effectiveness of our national statistics and its affirmation at international level.

Coming back to the approached topics, I would like to mention that, although Romanian statistics celebration of this year is not marked by a round figure, it will take place, as any other time, within an effervescent environment marked by the satisfaction and joy of all statisticians entailed by professional, but also personal accomplishments. At the same time, the Statistician's Day is a moment for reflection and awareness of his mission in the society.

Приета за печат на 7.11.2007 г.